Výsledky vzdelávania:

The course aims to provide complex view on the role of conflict in current international relations and international politics. The course approaches the topic from normative as well as from critical point of view. It stresses the role of human rights and human security. During the semester the students analyze the conflict from its emergence until the resolution including negotiations, mediations and peace missions, thus the student gather theoretical as well as practical knowledge on the conflict development, on the role of peacemaking in conflict areas, on peacebuilding and peacekeeping tools based on the cases from not that far history. The course aims also to interconnect the area of peace studies with the problem of humanitarian and development aid, reconciliation process and security studies.

Stručná osnova predmetu:

- 1) Emergence, escalation of conflict and conflict analysis. Evolution of Warfare.
- 2) Conflict and peace in international relations theories and political philosophy
- 3) Conflict prevention and conflict resolution
- 4) Conflict and peace in international law and the role of the UN
- 5) Human security as a current trend
- 6) Multilateralism and the Responsibility to Protect
- 7) Peace operations
- 8) What next? Peacebuilding and reconciliation.
- 9) Humanitarianism and development. Aid or business?
- 10) The role of media during the conflict and peacebuilding.

Basic information about the Holocaust in the individual European countries. Comparison of Holocaust's developments and countries', resp. regions' specifics

Stručná osnova predmetu:

Holocaust cannot be understood just as the tragedy of Jewish, resp. Roma victims, but it has to be interpreted as the tragedy and traumatizing experience of the whole society, in broader understanding as the failure of the entire European culture and its Judeo-Christian roots. Content of the words – Holocaust, shoa, poraimos and differences among them. What were the roots the political power used in the genocide of Jewish, resp. Roma population? When Holocaust started? Holocaust and the majoritarian society. Attitudes of the church's circles. Common and different features of Holocaust in individual countries (occupied, satellite, neutral and hostile states). Specifics of the Holocaust in Slovakia, Holocaust and the present time, so-called revisionist literature about Holocaust.

Výsledky vzdelávania:

The aim of this course is to introduce students to some of the most important issues of international relations. The course will begin with the way the world is divided focusing on the socially constructed nature of the state. Afterwards the political nature of international organizations will be discussed. Then we will focus on more economic issues. The current North-South relations will be introduced through a colonial perspective. Students will then learn basic tenets of International Political Economy as an important part of International Relations. We will discuss various forms of inequality in the world. Two guests will introduce critical security studies and humanitarian interventions focusing on the Responsibility to Protect. Students will also learn about unequal relations between East and West, environmental issues will be introduced through an analysis of two movies and the importance of celebrities in international politics will be highlighted as well.

Výsledky vzdelávania:

The main objective of the course Introduction to Turkish Studies / Modern Turkey is to introduce various matters, related to Turkish Republic as a country, whose international demand of understanding grows rapidly year after year. Highly flexible curriculum and course's syllabus offer students a wide range of information on history, politics, economics, sociology, conflict resolution and culture. Students will acquire a basic overview of development, the current settings, as well as the direction to which the modern Turkish Republic is heading to. A significant portion of time will be given to the focus on Turkey's place in Europe and between the world powers (G-20). Theoretical knowledge of the political development of the Republic in the context of prospective membership in the European Union may be used for further analytical research of the region, as well as for other related studies of political sciences.

Stručná osnova predmetu:

- Introduction to Turkish Studies and historical foundations of the Ottoman Empire
- Establishment of the first Republic of Turkey – from an empire to a republic of European type
- Mustafa Kemal Ataturk - the father of modern Turkey, his reforms and the foundations of secularism
- The challenges of state-building and multiparty political system
- Military coups and military power of the Republic of Turkey

- Origin and evolution of political Islam in Turkey
- Turkish policy of the new millennium - constitution, political systems and party ideologies
- Modern Turkish society - Islamization, polarization and minorities
- Trauma of today's Turkey - domestic protests, regional allies and unresolved disputes with neighbors (Cyprus, Armenia, Syria, etc.)
- Turkey embraced/captivated by world powers – relations with China, Russia, the United States and international organizations
- The (never-)ending journey to the European Union - past relations, development, stagnation and the perspectives of the full membership of Turkey in the European Union
- Quo Vadis, Turkey? - theoretical perspective vs. political and social will in so called New Turkey

The aim of the class is to prepare the students to be able to use political English skillfully, practically and naturally, and to apply specific vocabulary needed in a political context. Students should be able to read and listen to English political texts (written, read, spoken), comprehend them, and critically and analytically express their opinion on them in English.

Stručná osnova predmetu:

The class consists of an interactive lecture combined with a practical seminar which will require active participation on the part of the students. Class topics will include several areas -- from the fundamental terms related to political systems, government and representational bodies, through the legislative environment, international relations and European institutions, all the way to historically and socially relevant classical texts which have defined the political language of today. The class will focus on the students' ability to perceive, understand, reproduce and independently create a variety of texts using political English.
