| Learning outcomes:Upon successful completion of the course, the student will have gained basic understanding of Aristotle's ethical theory, especially with regard to its connection with psychology. The student will be able to work (in a scholarly way) with the relevant textual evidence (Nicomachean Ethics, Eudemian Ethics, De Anima). This includes knowledge of the key philosophical concepts and understanding of the basic exegetical and philosophical problems in the relevant texts.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                                     |

There are three compulsory readings for each seminar, each group reads the first and one of the remaining two readings based on the teacher's decision. Students are expected to provide a concise reading summary focusing on key arguments. During the discussion, presenting students are expected to defend the authors' arguments and try to explain how they understood the reading.Active participation: Students are expected to participate in seminars and actively participate in the discussion. Due to the fact that not everyone is equally well able to discuss in person at the seminar, there is an opportunity to send questions and comments before the seminar, but also after the seminar to the teacher.Written test in the final week: Written answers to open-ended questions, formulated on the basis of the topics covered in the course.The student is obliged to attend lectures as stated in the syllabi. The lecturer may justify the absence if it is caused by incapacity for work or other obstacles on the part of the student. In this case, the teacher can request the fulfillment of a substitute task, e.g. short additional seminar work, which will serve as a substitute for absence. |                                                       |

| Learning outcomes:The course will start with introductory seminars where the students will learn about concepts necessary for the analysis of democratic institutions and then proceed from citizens' interests through political parties and elections to parliaments (legislatures) and governments (executives), and the relationships between them. The course will then proceed to other institutions ensuring separation of powers, mainly focusing on the role of constitutional courts as 'negative legislators' but addressing vertical separation of powers – i.e. territorial organization of states – as well. In the final part of the course, students will learn about mechanisms of citizen control over political institutions, those organized – such as NGOs and social movements, to those that ensure more direct involvement of citizens in the political process, e.g. referenda or deliberative tools. |       |       |       |       |      |

The test will consist of closed and open questions from the topics covered in the course and will take place online on the Moodle platform. Additional information will be provided during seminars.Presentation of the structure of the seminar work - 20% of the evaluation. During the seminar, students will present the research design and structure of their seminar work (see below). During the first meeting, students will receive a list of questions from which to choose the topic of their seminar work. Presentation length max. 20 minutes, the rules for the presentation apply the same as for the seminar paper (however, 5 pieces of literature are enough).Critique of the structure of another student's seminar work - 10% of the evaluation. Students' role will be to provide critical feedback on the presentation. Students choose the topic they want to give feedback during the first meeting, as well as choose their topic of the seminar paper (and thus also the presentation).Seminar work - 30% of evaluation. The student's task will be to answer the submitted question in the range of 1500 words (+ - 10%) - the text must be dense and must support the answer to the research question. The seminar work must also include a critical evaluation of the literature in the analysis of the studied problem. In the analysis, pay attention to the definition of concepts, the logic of the concepts used. It is necessary to use academic literature, at least 15 academic books / scientific articles (from international journals), for which you can also use information about the current problem from relevant sources where it is current (print media, official newspaper websites, reports from research centers and Come.). Under no circumstances use blogs or irrelevant websites (eg |                                     |

| Learning outcomes:The aim of the course is to give a comprehensive picture on the development, current state, recent problems and future perspectives of the economic integration in the European Union. Through analyzing the historic development students are going to be better prepared to understand the current design of various policies and to evaluate the costs and benefits of the integration process. The applied comparative perspective helps to examine the role of the European Union and its member states in the globalized world economy as well as to address the significant differences between the members. The general, holistic approach applied to various areas helps to frame the environment where EU policies work. At the end, the students shall be able to distinguish the institutions of the Union from other global, regional and national institutions and understand their specific nature in a historic context. |                                                                 |

| Course requirements:The course consists of weekly lectures and seminars. Course materials, including the syllabus and interim announcements, will be available in MS Teams. Absences are taken into account according to the Study Regulations of Comenius University in Bratislava, Faculty of Arts, Art. 4.9. During semester, students are supposed to study texts assigned for a particular week and prepare a resume according to the specified structure, or prepare another assignment on a specified topic. Active participation in discussions is required during the seminar. If at least three assignments are not handed in, no credit will be awarded. At the end of semester, students will take a written test.Grading scale:A=92-100%; B=84-91%; C=76-83%; D=68-75%; E=60-67%; FX=0-59%Violation of academic ethics will be punished, and the student will lose all the received points in the relevant assessment.Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): 50/50 |                                                                                        |
| Learning outcomes:Students will acquire knowledge about the development of folklore studies in relation to the historical-political context. They will critically analyze sources to examine the place and function of folklore in ideological and political currents in Europe. They will be able to apply their knowledge to the examination of contemporary phenomena related to folk culture, folklore and politics.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                                                        |

| Course requirements:10 % -Active participation40 % -Presentation (power point)and handout (notes)50 % -Research paperPresentation–each student should give one short (15-20 minutes with additional 5-10 minutes discussion) presentationduring the course. The students (in a power point presentation) should try to (interestingly) explain the main questions, findings, arguments and conclusions of a chosen issue while focusing on the most important questions and keeping the time limit. A few (3-5) page handout (written summary of the presentation) is required. Max. 20 points could be given for each presentation and another 10 for the quality of power point presentationand the handout.Handout (notes)–summary notes are required from each student. The notes should be prepared according to the course schedule and given (in a printed form) to the lecturer and shared with other students. They should be informative as much as possible to give an idea to other students about the problem as well as with references on useful sources. Max. 10 points could be given for each summary.Research paper–8 to 12 page paper (Times New Roman, 1.5 times spacing, counted without notes, references, tables and figures) is required on a chosen topic agreed by the instructor. Try to avoid simple descriptions and focuson sources of problems,factors influencing the development,comparisons of countries, reforms, institutions etc. Asking questions, trying to answer them, arguing and drawing down conclusions is what is needed instead of just describing a particular event, some policies orinstitutions (it does not mean a good description is not welcomed). The academic style of writing is highly encouraged and appreciated, simplifications and journalist style should be avoided as much as possible. Max. 50 points couldbe given for the seminar paper.Evaluation:A: 100% - 92%B: 91% - 84%C: 83% - 76% |                                                                                                   |

| Learning outcomes: The aim is to give a general overview of the process of economic transformation of CEE countries (with special accent on Slovakia) from the socialist centrally-planned economies to free market economies integrated to the European Union. The students shall be able to examine and understand the characteristics, nature and structure of economic systems (socialism and capitalism) and the revolutionary and unprecedented transformation processes. Different policy choices, strategies and scope of transition and trajectories of CEE countries (economic development, achievements and failures) will be analysed in detail and using a comparative perspective. We will look at the current state of CEE countries as well: what kind of socio-economic models, capitalisms were created, which countries were more and which less successful and what are the major challenges today. By the end of the course, the students shall be able to understand, evaluate and analyse the basic processes of economic transformation in CEE countries after the fall of the iron curtain. This gives them a valuable knowledge and expertise usable in both the public and private sectors and the academic world as well. |

| Learning outcomes:The course aims to introduce students to the study of gender in ethnology and social/cultural anthropology. The course covers the main relevant theoretical orientations. Theories of gender will be illustrated by mass media representations (films, advertisements, etc.). The class will include practical exercises aimed at understanding gender issues. Relevant texts on each topic will be accessible in the e-learning system. Students will gain knowledge of anthropological theories of gender and will be able to apply them to the study of contemporary society.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                        |

| Learning outcomes:After completing the course students have knowledge of the Native religions of North America. They understand the essence of North American Native religions and they can distinguish between the religious pattern of hunters and gatherers and farmers. They are also familiar with Native mythologies and ritualism and are able to reflect the context of Native American cultures and religions as well as their current forms. They also understand the theory of cultural areas and are able to apply it to the example of North America.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                               |

From the beginning, we consistently lead students to consistent writing according to APA standards, which concerns not only citations but also text structure, table and graph formats, and other essentials. Foreign departments from Europe and the USA are also proceeding in the same way |       |       |      |      |      |

| Course requirements:Course evaluation weight: 50/50. Continuous evaluation during semester, including readings, written exercises, participation during lectures, and oral presentation (50%) and final assessment of a written paper (50%) at the end of the semester. A: 100% – 92% B: 91% – 84% C: 83% – 76% D: 75% – 68% E: 67% – 60% FX: 59% – 0%. Attendance at lectures, participation in class discussions, oral presentation, and successful completion of written exercises and the final paper are required for a positive result in this course. Your contribution will be continuously evaluated. Students are entitled to 2 absences in accordance with paragraphs 9 and 10, Article 4 of the Internal Regulation No. 5/2020 (Study Regulations of the Faculty of Arts, Comenius University in Bratislava), and must complete all written and oral assignments. Violation of academic ethics, including plagiarism, will be punished, and the student will lose all the points in the relevant assessment. |                                                                  |
| Learning outcomes:Current trends in archaeological science focus on materials analyses at the molecular level. Students will gain knowledge of fundamental research methods and materials in archaeological science. Topics will address research questions about mobility, diet, domestication, relatedness, kinship, soil fertility, and environmental change through residue analysis, genetics, proteomics, stable isotopes, and archaeological soil chemistry. In addition, students will have a basic understanding of the interdisciplinary fields of biomolecular archaeology and ancient DNA. Students will be able to describe the appropriate instrumentation for specific materials and questions, interpret the research results, critically read scientific papers, and know what methods to apply in their own research.                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                                  |

| Learning outcomes:Students are good at fundamentals of the probability theory in order to effectively use its apparatus (in Bayesian epistemology) for modelling different “strength” of belief epistemic agents. Given a finer-grained epistemic apparatus, students have the ability to analyse and evaluate some of the standard problems of epistemology and methodology, e.g. the problem of induction, disagreement, justification, etc.                                                                                                                                                  |                                                               |

| Course requirements:Active participation in meetings, development of the concept of the entire faculty magazine Under the Line, participation development of a marketing strategy for its promotion and submission of 3 finished materials (within the specified range depending on the selected genre and topic, min. length of one text is 5,000 characters), which after going through the editorial and editorial process can be included in the magazine.In the initial part of the semester (for the 3rd meeting), the student will submit a reflection on the importance of the entire faculty magazine, in which he should indicate his conception of the magazine.By the first meeting in April, the student will submit 3 journalistic speeches, on which he will receive feedback from his classmates. Based on the feedback, the student can edit his texts and then choose one to submit for evaluation by the teacher (before the first meeting in May).Students are evaluated on the basis of the content and formal level of the submitted reasoning (10 points), on the basis of providing active feedback to classmates - they document it in a short document that they hand over to the teacher (20 points), on the basis of the content and formal level of the three submitted journalistic speeches (They can get 30 points from a classmate who evaluates their texts as part of providing feedback and 40 points for evaluating a selected text from the teacher).The evaluation depends on the quality of the submitted materials - on their level of content and formality (linguistic, stylistic and typographical) form.Violation of academic ethics will be punished, and the student will lose all the received points in the relevant assessment. Grading scale: A (100 – 92), B (91 – 84), C (83 – 76), D (75 – 68), E (67 – 60), Fx (59 – 0)Allowed maximum 2 absences.Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): preliminary 100 % |                                            |

After the participation in this course, students have information about working in an editorial office and they are familiar with the journalist's scope of employment. They are acquainted not only with writing process, but also with managing of colleagues, work of editors and proof readers. Students after this course fully understand how an editorial office works and they also see how magazines are made. Students are able to deliver texts (materials) suited for the magazine, both from content and formal aspect.

| Learning outcomes:After successfully completing the course, students have knowledge of significant events in the history of ancient and modern mathematics, which are closely related to philosophical thinking. They have a deeper understanding of the role of exact thinking in philosophy. They are able to apply and extend their mathematical skills (algebra, arithmetic, geometry, basics of differential calculus) using particular examples.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                                  |

| Learning outcomes:Students will get acquainted with basic terms and tools of history and memory in research and public discourse, the theoretical general background of how we remember (and remembered in the past) and how memory is researched, the relationship between memory and history. Beyond theory and recent developments in interdisciplinary memory research, students will get acquainted with selected topics especially from medieval history of Slovakia and Central Europe, their memory and presence in academic and public discourse in past and present. Students will be able to discuss themes not only from medieval past and medievalisms but more recent areas of memory research related to Central Europe according to their interests. They will learn to critically read, discuss and analyze them; the emphasis will be put on argumentation and presentation in discussion. |                                                                                    |

| Learning outcomes:The course reflects on politics and governance in autocratic regimes, not only in the past, but also current trends of political development in Europe and in the world. In this course, students will learn about approaches to defining, studying and analyzing of autocratic regimes. Current political development shows that autocratic (i.e. non-democratic) regimes remain to prove to be vital, particularly by acting as democracies, hence they organize elections, but in the context of „controlled“ political competition. Several new, as well as consolidated democracies face a variety of crises, which leads to weakening of democracy. The course will also address current developments in the countries of East and Central Europe, which despite expectations, caused by relatively successful political and economic transformation of former Soviet satellites (after the fall of iron curtain), and their speedy integration in the EU, have not led to stabilization, attractiveness and spreading of democracy around the world. |                                                 |

| Learning outcomes:The following course is designed to introduce the political system of Ukraine and its applicative functioning. Students will be able to find out what political regime exists in Ukraine, how the parliament and the government operate, what are the reasons of the tragic events of 2013/2014 in Ukraine and what challenges are present in Ukraine's foreign policy. The foreign policy challenges include Ukraine's cooperation with the European Union and the relations with the Russian Federation. At the end of the course, students will be able to generally define Ukraine's political system and the country's place on the international political arena.                                                                                        |                                                            |

| Learning outcomes:An intense course for those interested in understanding the changing role of journalism on the basis of power, lobbying, and ethics inside as well as outside the mass media. Providing basic orientation in the reality of the mass media, the course offers in depth analyses of what makes a "compelling narrative" in traditional media, new media, on blogs and social media; exposes students to thoughts on journalism and "dejournalism" as a whole as well as on the possibilities and limits of mass media manipulation of texts, sounds, images; teaches students to distinguish between mission and practice of traditional media, new media, and social media; clarifies the implications of the panoptic-synoptic normalization of "bodies and souls" of mass media houses, mass media professionals, and their audience. Development of personal skills to argue, including correct quotations, is also covered. |                                                                   |

| Learning outcomes:An intense course for those interested in understanding the changing role of journalism on the basis of power, lobbying, and ethics inside as well as outside the mass media. Providing basic orientation in the reality of the mass media, the course offers in depth analyses of what makes a "compelling narrative" in traditional media, new media, on blogs and social media; exposes students to thoughts on journalism and "dejournalism" as a whole as well as on the possibilities and limits of mass media manipulation of texts, sounds, images; teaches students to distinguish between mission and practice of traditional media, new media, and social media; clarifies the implications of the panoptic-synoptic normalization of "bodies and souls" of mass media houses, mass media professionals, and their audience. Development of personal skills to argue, including correct quotations, is also covered. |                                                                   |

| Course requirements:- Presentation –One short (15-20 minutes with additional 5-10 minutes discussion) presentation should be given by each student during the course. 40%- Handout (notes)–summary notes are required from each student. The notes should be prepared according to the course schedule and given (in a printed form) to the lecturer and shared with other students. 10%- Seminar paper –8 to 12page paper (Times New Roman, 1.5 times spacing, without notes, references, tables and figures) is required on any of the topics in the course schedule (it could be focused more on a particular issue). The topic should be agreed by the course instructor. Try to avoid simple descriptions and write a paper focusing on sources of problems, comparisons of countries, systems, institutions etc. Asking questions, trying to answer them, arguing and drawing down conclusions is what is needed instead of just describing particular issues, policies, institutions (it does not mean a good description is not welcomed).50%Grading scale:A: 100% - 92%B: 91% - 84%C: 83% - 76%D: 75% - 68%E: 67% - 60%FX: 59% - 0%Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): 50/50 |                                         |
| Learning outcomes:The aim of the course is to examine the most important issues and challenges of public budgets and fiscal policies in the developed countries. How the large redistributive welfare systems (like pension and health-care systems) work? How labour markets are regulated and influenced by government policies? What are the most important challenges welfare systems and public budgets face? What about the current and possible future trends? We put a great emphasis on comparing various countries, socio-economic models, institutions, on best practices and on the study of                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                         |

| Course requirements:Regular attendance at the weekly class and participation on discussions is necessary for the successful completion of this course. All students will be expected to study materials, to prepare short topics (papers) and to participate on the informal discussion. There will be final colloquium within this course. It will be focussed on testing basic knowledge of Roman private life. Violation of academic ethics will be punished, and the student will lose all the received points in the relevant assessment.Grading scale:0-59%-FX, 60-67%-E, 68-75%-D, 76-83%-C, 84-91%-B, 92-100%-AScale of assessment (preliminary/final): 100/0 |                                                          |
| Learning outcomes:The course introduces students to key aspects of private life of ancient Roman society. It is designed to form the necessary background for other courses in ancient history. On successful completion of this course, students are able to demonstrate familiarity with core features of Roman private life (Roman family, Children, Occupation, Housing and architecture etc.). Students are able to demonstrate an historical understanding of key points of Roman cultural and sociological history and an ability to evaluate the usefulness and relevance of different types of historical and archeological evidence.                                    |                                                          |

| Learning outcomes:The students have knowledge about the position of women in ancient society, of their role and agency in cultural, social, and political history. The students are able to interpret the everyday life of women in Greece and Rome from the works of the most famous ancient writers and from many epigraphic monuments. They know how to work with various ancient sources, to interpret and evaluate them. The students have also the basic overview of the sources and literature on gender studies, with a focus on antiquity, and are familiar with current issues in the field of gender studies.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                                                          |

| Learning outcomes:The aim of the soft skills course needed for proper navigation on the job market of shared service centers is to acknowledge students with the portfolio of highly effective communication tools. Companies associated within the Business Service Center Forum (BSCF) and the under the auspices of the American Chamber of Commerce in Slovakia currently employ more than 34 000 full-time employees. They have identified soft communication skills as the most crucial, but also one of the least developed, skills fresh graduates possess when entering the job market. Upon successful completion of the course, students would be capable of more effective teamwork in remote international environment, managing their work time properly and efficiently and of communicating with higher portion of assertiveness. They will also increase their capabilities in providing and receiving constructive feedback, conflict resolution at a workplace and captivating their audience while presenting or applying design principles into daily communication routine. |                                                                          |

| Learning outcomes:The course focuses on selected topics and problem areas of sociology of the family and the so-called sociology of private life. The aim of the course is to expand the knowledge of students about the issues of family and partnership. With the help of an interdisciplinary approach using knowledge not only of sociology but also of history, historical demography, demography, ethnology and social anthropology, students know the development and changes in family and partner behavior and can identify their causes with a primary focus on Slovak realities. At the end of the course, students are able to use selected sociological terms and concepts and have adopted a sociological approach to their grasp and cognition. They use the acquired knowledge and skills in theoretical and empirical research of these phenomena and social facts.                                            |                                                 |

| Learning outcomes:Upon completion of the course, the student will be able to master the Spanish language on the basis of basic written and spoken communication. The content is based on the SERR reference levels. In this course, it is level A1 (the student does not need to have a background in Spanish): The student understands and can use familiar everyday expressions and basic vocabulary intended to meet specific needs. The student can introduce himself/herself and others and can ask and answer questions about personal details such as where he/she lives, people he/she knows and things he/she owns. Can talk in a simple way provided the communication partner speaks slowly and is ready to help. In the courses, the 4 basic language competences are developed in parallel: comprehension (listening/reading), speaking (oral interaction/independent oral expression), writing and grammar. |                                                          |

| Learning outcomes:Upon completion of the course, the student will be able to master the Spanish language on the basis of basic written and spoken communication. The content is based on the SERR reference levels. In this course, it is a consolidation of A1 level: The student understands and can use familiar everyday expressions and basic vocabulary intended to meet specific needs. The student can introduce himself/herself and others and can ask and answer questions about personal details such as where he/she lives, people he/she knows and things he/she owns. Can talk in a simple way provided the communication partner speaks slowly and is ready to help. In the courses, the 4 basic language competences are developed in parallel: comprehension (listening/reading), speaking (oral interaction/independent oral expression), writing and grammar. |                                                          |

| Course requirements:The weight of the course evaluation (midterm/final) is 20/80, the paper during the semester: 20%, the colloquium examination: 80%. A: 100% - 92% B: 91% - 84% C: 83% - 76% D: 75% - 68% E: 67% - 60% FX: 59% - 0%. The prerequisite for passing the course is the presentation of a paper and successful completion of the examination. The student may have a maximum of 2 absences, and must complete all work assignments. Violation of academic ethics will be punished, and the student will lose all the received points in the relevant assessment.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                                               |
| Learning outcomes:Upon completion of the course, students will have an understanding of the nature and specifics of 14C dating in archaeology, the complex nature of information in archaeological 14C dates, and the mechanisms involved in their production. Upon completion of the course, they are able to handle published dates at a level of transparent archaeological interpretation and have the knowledge to independently design and solve simple research projects in the application of 14C dating in archaeology.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                                               |
| Class syllabus:1. Libby and the advent of radiocarbon dating in archaeology: the first radiocarbon revolution, precision and accuracy 2. The second and third radiocarbon revolutions 3. The theory of formulating absolute-chronological questions at a general level: event, archaeological event, archaeological absolute-chronological construction 4. Chronometric hygiene: sample-context relationship, original sample material, behavioral aspect of the original artifact 5. Bone as an archaeological 14C sample: offsets caused by dietary components, collagen metabolism and cremation 6. Wood as an archaeological 14C sample 7. Collection and documentation of archaeological 14C samples 8. Calibration curves: technical accuracy thresholds for calendar data (chronological resolution) 9. Bayesian chronological modelling 10. Combining and comparing dates with unequal chronological information 11. | Course requirements:The course consists of weekly lectures and seminars. Course materials, including the syllabus and interim announcements, will be available in MS Teams. Absences are taken into account according to the Study Regulations of Comenius University in Bratislava, Faculty of Arts, Art. 4.9. During semester, students will be required to present a selected academic text or assigned topic at the seminar. Active participation in discussions is required during the seminar. At mid-semester, students will turn in a transcribed interview conducted with any respondent on the topic of a historical event that the respondent remembers. During the second half of the semester, students analyze these interviews. The results of the analyses will be discussed in the final colloquium.Grading scale: A=92-100%; B=84-91%; C=76-83%; D=68-75%; E=60-67%; FX=0-59%Violation of academic ethics will be punished, and the student will lose all the received points in the relevant assessment.Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): 40/60 |                                                         |
| Learning outcomes:Students will gain an understanding of the field of historical anthropology and the oral history method used within the social science disciplines. They will be able to deal with issues of collective memory and the cultural transmission of representations about the past. They will become skilled in the use of oral history in field research, which they will be able to apply to the study of contemporary society and memories of historical events.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                         |

| Learning outcomes:Students will learn about various types of creative communication techniques, which they will also try out on a practical level. The emphasis is on working with the word, creativity, the ability to present your idea. Creative exercises work with humor, absurdity, associations. Upon successful completion of this course, students will learn about creative techniques that will help them in their future work with the word, whether in advertising agencies, periodicals or PR. The aim is to teach them not only to play with words, but also to better, more precisely formulate and present their ideas and thoughts to others.                        |                                                     |

| Learning outcomes:Students will learn about various types of creative communication techniques, which they will also try out on a practical level. The emphasis is on working with the word, creativity, the ability to present your idea. Creative exercises work with humor, absurdity, associations. Upon successful completion of this course, students will learn about creative techniques that will help them in their future work with the word, whether in advertising agencies, periodicals or PR. The aim is to teach them not only to play with words, but also to better, more precisely formulate and present their ideas and thoughts to others.                        |                                                     |
