Course requirements: Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): 30/70
Learning outcomes: The graduates of the course gained knowledge and an overview of the application of sociology outside the world of exclusively human actors in the current and dynamically developing field of interdisciplinary research on the border of social and natural sciences. The course is divided into theoretical and empirical block. The theoretical block deals with classical and modern concepts enabling sociology to step outside the boundaries of the animal species homo sapiens. The empirical block applies theoretical knowledge to selected topics and problems of interspecies relations and relations with artificial actors. Students have acquired the ability of theoretical sociological reflection on human interactions with the natural and man-made environment, as well as the ability to use empirically based knowledge in real life situations.
Class syllabus: Block I 1. Socially without people (neo-Durkheimism after Durkheim)? 2. Naturalization of Society: Sociological Organicism, Darwinism and Sociobiology (from Spencer to Dawkins) 3. Culturalization of biology: hermeneutic biology (Z. Neubauer, A. Markoš), biosemiotics and the problem of "understanding" in social and natural sciences (neo-Kantian dispute over the method of social sciences in the context of contemporary debates and knowledge) 4. Interactionism as a stepping stone for sociology beyond humanity (Mead, Znaniecki, Bláha, Schutz and social constructivism); discussion of sociological concepts of subjectivity and acting 5. Theory of cyborgization (D. Haraway), ANT (B. Latour) and a strong program of sociology of culture (J. Alexander) as an effort to extend the concept of society beyond man in contemporary sociology 6. Anthropological difference - to attempts to find an unquestionable difference between man and animal, nature and culture II. block

7. Atypical social actor: an autistic mind halfway between the animal and human world (T. Grandinová) and animals as members of households and families and as bearers of (civil?) Rights and moral claims (animal theology); 8. Domestication as a social birth in interaction with animals or plants (who domesticated whom?) 9. animals as social and health therapists (zootherapy) and as pedagogical workers (animal assisted education) 10. Social life of plants (ethnobotany and talking to plants in our society) 11. Talking forests, dreaming dogs and interspecies communication in cultural anthropology (E. Kohn); wolves in contemporary Europe as a social problem 12. communication with actors of artificial intelligence, body boundaries and subjectivity equipped with technology (cyborgization in the real world and in virtual reality)
