Number of credits: 3
Recommended semester: 4.
Educational level: I.II.
Prerequisites: EBF.IKT/E-S-ET-018/15 - Chapters of the History of Philosophy 1
Course requirements: Completion in the school exam period. Elaboration of an essay on a topic assigned by the teacher. Of the final grade of the course, the grade of the essay will be 20%. Oral examination during the examination period. The oral examination will account for 80% of the final course grade. Compulsory attendance at the lectures, two absences are tolerated.
Learning outcomes: This course is designed to introduce students of Protestant theology to key issues and figures in the history of Western philosophy from the late patristic period to the present. In doing so, it takes into account both the context of Protestant theology and the treatment of issues in the history of philosophy of religion. Upon completion of the course, the student will gain a basic understanding of selected philosophical concepts along with their application to a specific historical period. The knowledge thus acquired will enable the student to apply the relevant concepts in his/her further studies, especially in the fields of systematic theology, church history, history of dogma and philosophy of religion.
Class syllabus: In terms of content and themes, we will focus on the area of philosophical problems, which are historically defined by the period of the late patristic period up to the present day. We dedicate the period of patristic philosophy to its chief representative, Augustine. Within medieval philosophy, we emphasize in particular the controversy over universals and the conceptions of the representatives of late scholasticism (Roger Bacon, Duns Scotus, William Ockham). Thematically, we will focus mainly on ontological issues with reference to semantic problems related to theological terms. We will devote the period of Renaissance philosophy to the problem of the Reformation in the context of philosophical thought, taking into account ethical issues. We examine modern philosophy against the background of the debate between empiricism and rationalism (epistemological issues), which we follow up with a basic characterization of the Enlightenment and an explanation of its relation to religion (issues in political and social philosophy). In particular, we will present the history of 19th- and 20th-century philosophy through a comprehensive characterization of Immanuel Kant's work and the currents of thought that responded to Kant's philosophical initiative. Finally, we will discuss the most important currents of 20th century philosophy: phenomenology, existentialism, structuralism, and analytic philosophy, with an emphasis on semantic issues. We will also introduce key figures in philosophy of religion, or 20th century philosophy of religion.

Academic year: 2024/2025
University: Comenius University Bratislava
Faculty: Evangelical Lutheran Theological Faculty
Course ID: EBF.KPT/E-aS-ET-046/22	Course title: Introduction to Pastoral Care
Educational activities: Type of activities: lecture Number of hours: per week: 3 per level/semester: 39 Form of the course: on-site learning
Number of credits: 9
Recommended semester: 7.
Educational level: I.II.
Prerequisites: EBF.KNZ/E-aS-ET-021/22 - Introduction to the New Testament and EBF.KSZ/E-aS-ET-022/22 - Introduction to the Old Testament
Course requirements: Completion of the examination during the examination period Active participation in lectures; a written test in which the student obtains at least 60% of points as a condition for the oral exam. Weight of the intermediate / final evaluation: 0% / 100% Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): 0% / 100%
Learning outcomes: The graduate of the course will gain knowledge about current pastoral trends in the present, the content and methodical emphasis of pastoral service, as well as basic communication skills. He can compare these emphases and then effectively apply them in specific pastoral situations in the service of the individual. He will gain sensitivity for a holistic understanding of the situation and personality of the individual, as well as the individual in interpersonal relationships. He/she can apply the acquired knowledge and skills to specific situations in order to support the personal race, spiritual maturity, and solve problems of life and faith. Based on the interpretation and practical demonstrations, the student will get to know the basic aspects of interpersonal communication (non-verbal, verbal), which he/she will later use in conducting pastoral conversations in various situations. The reception of theory is supported by practice in the form of practical exercises, which gives the course the dimension of experiential teaching. In the discussion on the work The Wounded Healer, the student learns the specifics of pastoral work in the context of the postmodern era, gets the opportunity to formulate the role and identity of the pastorizer, with which he/she can subsequently identify. The student practices the methodology of solving pastoral problems in the context of kerygmatic pastoralism. He/she also verifies and develops his ability to transfer the theoretical knowledge gained so far from the field of biblical sciences, systematic theology (dogmatics, ethics) and practical theology (homiletics, hymnology) into pastoral practice. By conducting a pastoral interview, he/she verifies his abilities by using various methods of conducting a pastoral interview, while developing pastoral competencies.
Class syllabus:

1. Biblical justification, Phenomenology of pastoralism; Man in God's world, looks into anthropology and cosmology by Martin Luther
2. Pastoral of the present, Kerygmatic, Therapeutic, Educational pastoral, current trends in pastorals
3. Psychological phenomena in conversation, Personality types and their importance for pastoral help,
The importance of the place of pastoral conversation

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Academic year: 2024/2025
University: Comenius University Bratislava
Faculty: Evangelical Lutheran Theological Faculty
Course ID: EBF.IKT/E-S-ET-076/15	Course title: Philosophy of Religion
Educational activities: Type of activities: lecture Number of hours: per week: 3 per level/semester: 39 Form of the course: on-site learning
Number of credits: 3
Recommended semester: 6.
Educational level: I.II.
Prerequisites: EBF.IKT/E-S-ET-026/15 - Chapters of the History of Philosophy 2
Course requirements: I. Elaboration of an essay on a topic assigned by the teacher. Of the final grade of the course, the grade of the essay will be 50%. II. There will be three written tests of 40 points each (120 points in total) during the semester. To obtain an overall grade of A on all three tests, a total of at least 100 points on all three tests, a grade of B of at least 90 points, a grade of C of at least 80 points, a grade of D of at least 70 points, and a grade of E of at least 60 points are required. The written tests will account for 50% of the final course grade. III. The final grade of the course consists of the sum of the overall grade of the test and the grade of the essay. Compulsory attendance at the lectures, two absences are tolerated.
Learning outcomes: The student understands the subject matter, the arguments (theistic and atheistic) of the philosophy of religion, and their critique. The student will acquire the basic methodological skills to be able to engage in polemics within classical and contemporary debates in the philosophy of religion. He or she will also acquire knowledge of the basic themes that are the subject of these debates and an understanding of their broader philosophical context. The methodological skills and content knowledge acquired will enable him/her to grasp and critically evaluate particular arguments in the philosophy of religion.
Class syllabus: In terms of content and subject matter, we will focus on the classical deductive and inductive arguments concerning the a priori "proofs" of God's existence (ontological proof) and the aposteriori "proofs" of God's existence (cosmological, teleological, moral, and proof from religious experience). Other topics covered in the subject of philosophy of religion include: the method, subject matter, and content of philosophy of religion; the problem of evil; the relationship of soul (or mind) and body; religious language; religious diversity and interreligious dialogue; religion and political theory; the concept of God (omnipotence, omniscience, power, eternity); and finally, the relationship between science and faith.

Academic year: 2024/2025
University: Comenius University Bratislava
Faculty: Evangelical Lutheran Theological Faculty
Course ID: EBF.KNZ/E-aS-ET-059/22	Course title: Theology of the New Testament 1
Educational activities: Type of activities: lecture Number of hours: per week: 3 per level/semester: 39 Form of the course: on-site learning
Number of credits: 7
Recommended semester: 9.
Educational level: I.II.
Prerequisites: EBF.KNZ/E-aS-ET-032/22 - Exegesis of the New Testament 1 and EBF.KNZ/E-aS-ET-037/22 - Exegesis of the New Testament 2
Course requirements: The scale of assessment (preliminary/final): Final during the examination period. During the semester, students have to complete the written exam focusing on checking their current knowledge. The top scorers of the exam are 50 points, comprising 25% weight of the final assessment. During the examination period, students attend the oral exam focusing on the thorough checking of their knowledge from the whole course. The top scores of the final oral exam are 150 points, comprising 75% weight of the final assessment. Grades: 200 – 180 = A 179 – 160 = B 159 – 140 = C 139 – 120 = D 119 – 100 = E 99 – 0 = Fx Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): 25% / 75%
Learning outcomes: A student has the knowledge of the contents and thoughts of particular New Testament writings (Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, Epistles) worked out by relevant historical-critical, exegetical analysis, particularly: a systematic presentation of the issues concerning the topic of historical Jesus, a chronology of his life, and the theological interpretation of the key topics of Jesus' message and teaching, all based on various approaches and interpretation made by particular authors (scholars). In this way, a student is able to prove knowledge of the history and recent state of research in this field of investigation. At the same time, a student has gained the ability of independent theological evaluation of particular topics and questions, employing the gained knowledge by taking his/her own stand on relevant and actual questions.
Class syllabus: • The history and development of the New Testament theology

- The history and development of the historical Jesus research, its recent state, particular approaches, and hypotheses
- The sources of the historical Jesus research, chronology of Jesus' life, and a whole evaluation of current findings
- The main topics of Jesus' message and teaching, including their theological interpretation (Continually within the span of the weeks of the semester).
