University: Comenius University Bratislava
Faculty: Faculty of Arts
Course ID: FiF.KMJL/A-boED-273/25	Course title: Central European Women Writers in the 19th Century
Educational activities: Type of activities: seminar Number of hours: per week: 2 per level/semester: 28 Form of the course: on-site learning
Number of credits: 3
Recommended semester: 2., 4., 6.
Educational level: I., II.
Prerequisites:
Course requirements: Students will complete the course through an individual, practice-oriented project that reflects both their academic interests and their professional goals. Depending on their specialization, students may design teaching modules inspired by nineteenth-century women writers, prepare annotated translations of literary or epistolary texts, work with manuscripts and printed sources from an editorial perspective, or write a scholarly or popular article based on their research, with the possibility of publication after the course. Through these projects, students will learn how to prepare critical editions, write editorial and contextual notes, and interpret or translate texts within their historical and cultural frameworks. Preliminary evaluation during the instruction period: Presentation of one selected topic in the form of a report (30%). In the examination period: Colloquial exam consisting of the presentation and defence of a written project (70%). Grading scale: A: 100%–92% B: 91%–84% C: 83%–76% D: 75%–68% E: 67%–60% FX: 59%–0% Credit will not be awarded to a student who does not master 60% of the curriculum. Instructor will accept a maximum of 2 absences with documented evidence. Examination dates will be published via AIS no later than the last week of the semester. Scale of assessment (preliminary/final): 30/70
Learning outcomes: Upon successful completion of the course, students will have acquired a comprehensive understanding of the role of women writers in nineteenth-century Central Europe and of the cultural, political, and social contexts in which they worked. They will be able to identify major female authors from Hungary, the Czech lands, Slovakia, and Poland, and situate their works within the broader processes of nation-building, modernization, and the emergence of new public spheres. Students will be capable of analyzing literary texts from a gender-sensitive and comparative perspective, recognizing how women writers engaged with key issues such as national identity, women's emancipation, urbanization, and the representation of rural life. They will understand how the rise of mass journalism and literary periodicals shaped women's opportunities for publication and public recognition, and how these media influenced literary form and audience. The course will also equip students with practical and theoretical skills for working with archival and textual sources, including manuscript legacies, letters, diaries, and unpublished materials. Students will gain an introductory competence in the preparation of critical editions, learning how to compare textual variants, establish reliable texts, annotate historical and cultural references, and reflect on editorial decision-making. Finally, students will be able to critically assess how nineteenth-century women writers have been remembered, marginalized, or re-evaluated in school curricula, public monuments, and visual media such as film. In this way, the course develops both interpretive and methodological skills, enabling students to connect literary analysis with broader questions of cultural memory, canon formation, and historical representation in Central Europe.
